FEATURES

14 What Have You Done for Me Lately?

For campus bookstores, remaining relevant to today's students requires new forms of engagement—bolder, more sophisticated and, in many cases, designed to include them in something bigger, whether it's an environmental cause, a social network, or a national dialogue on academic material.

22 Book Clubs Without Borders

A modern twist on the literary salons of yore, virtual book clubs are flourishing even while general readership is in decline. How is online discussion heightening the reading experience and bolstering the transformative power of the book?

27 Give it Up for the Fans?

Copyright lawyer Grace Westcott explores fair dealing in fan fiction.

30 Finding the Right Equation

The financial realities of operating a bookstore.

38 For Readers Young and Restless

With subjects ranging from seafaring Romans to star-travelling monks, the books of Fall 2008 cover a wide breadth of adventures for children of all ages.
